WE NOMINATE

The 22 representatives of Oxford and Cambridge Universities who are doing more to cement relationships between Great Britain and this country than any amount of rationalization about the Atlantic Pact, than any number of exchanges of scholars, lecturers and avowed workers for world understanding. The first group of "college athletes" to invade the United States in 12 long years, this combined Oxford-Cambridge track and field team will meet Princeton and Cornell here on Saturday and will later face Harvard and Yale.

Captained by a 20-year old medical student conceivably one of the world's great milers, the visitors from overseas have taken over on the University campus. They are sharing dormitory quarters with the Princetonians they will face in competition, are eating in Oxfordesque dining halls and are discovering that Nassau Hall memorializes William III of the House of Nassau, that the American office of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust is headquartered here, that three campus buildings bear the names of British-born University presidents.

Between the Oxford-Cambridge teams of the past and the 1949 squad there are perceptible differences. This year's contingent is the youngest ever and, according to veteran observers, its members are strikingly similar to their American counterparts—in attitudes and interests and even in matters of humor. At a New York press luncheon early in the week studied British diffidence was no longer in evidence, as English spokesmen discussed their team and evaluated their chances without resorting to the overworked "We shall see what we shall see."

Saturday's meet has been billed as an international meet, but it is something more than England vs. America, for the Light and Dark Blues list natives of five continents among their entrants. South Africans will be featured in the half and quarter-miles, while a lanky Australian will be high jumping. Jamaica, B. W. I. has contributed a broad jumper and a two-miler was born in Georgetown, British Guiana. One of the hurdlers will run on familiar cinders, for he mastered the art at Yale before undertaking graduate studies at Cambridge.

For bolstering the tradition—in American eyes—that England's greatest triumphs have been won on her playing-fields; for helping write one more pleasant chapter in the history of Anglo-American relations; for personifying the resiliency of a gallant nation that is still striving for normalcy in the midst of abnormality; these 22 are TOWN TOPICS' nominees for Colorful Carnival. As they do every year, reunions were coming back to Princeton. Some 5,000 alumni, a good crowd but a lesser number than any time since the war, were expected, along with the usual array of colorful costumes, humor beamed toward Saturday's p-rade and general holiday atmosphere. Reunions at their best were one aspect of a college town at its best.

The Class of 1944, probably more unified five years after the date of its intended graduation than at any time since it entered college, looked to be a good bet to steal the show Saturday with three elephants in the line of march. Reputed to belong to Frank Buck, one of the lumbering beasts was scheduled to bring the 1944 class boy in & around University Field, matching the stunt of two years ago when 1942's class mascot landed in an autogiro.

The venerable but ever young-in-heart Henry G. Duffield of Llbrary Place, 89 years old and a member of the class of 1881, would be the senior member of the Old Guard. Places of honor in the p-rade were reserved for 1899, the 50th year class, and 1924, scheduled to lead the rest as it observed its silver anniversary. With overcrowding and shortages problems of the past, 1949's reunion weekend stood the chance of being the first to return to normal in the post-war era.

Parade - Election - Strike. Three events involving the Princeton Fire Department made news this week: The annual parade and inspection were set for Friday evening, June 24.

Mercer Engine Company No. 3 elected borough Clerk Robert F. Mooney, one of its members, to serve as its secretary, replacing the late, popular Joseph R. "Duke" Dennen, who had held the post so ably for many years.

The progress of the new headquarters for Princeton Engine Company No. 1 on Chestnut Street was threatened by the current steelworkers' strike. If work proceeds on schedule, occupancy by Thanksgiving is anticipated.

Miscellany. The year's first case of polio was diagnosed here this week, involving Frank Pietrinferno, age 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank —Continued on Page 6

It's New to Us

Scarves by Brooke Cadwallader. As conversation pieces, enliveners of your costume or colorful head-coverings, these silk, batiste and chiffon scarves are delightfully incomparable to anything else we've seen in the scarf line. In fact, they're so full of charm, humor and imagination that we've developed an urge to meet their artist creator, Brooke Cadwallader, because it would be fun to know anyone so obviously full of all three.

The scarves, which start at $4.50, come in huge and not-so-huge squares, and they are as varied as artistic talent and ideas can make them. Each has a name based on its theme. "Transportation" has a series of locomotives, starting from 1800 and progressing up to the present — colorful and quaint. "Pooches' Paradise" has a galaxy of canines, all with charm, done in aqua on yellow chiffon. "Zoo" has a periwinkle blue background with vivid wild life ranging from butterflies to giraffes. "The Drama", white with a pink, rosemary-filled border, has Ophelia's famous speech printed on it. "Circus" has a "Dingling Bros." clown in the center, separate panels with old and famous circus wagons, all dated.

Last but certainly not least in the entertainment line (you could keep a cocktail party going for a good half hour on it!) is "The Strata Star." It's nothing less than a reproduction of a newspaper (two pages) dated April 1, 1999, with every headline and ad good for a laugh. For instance, the weather report — "Today — Broken Clouds; Tomorrow — Repaired Clouds — continued weather." A large ad offers you a weekend excursion to the

Sports in Short

With or without the alumni p-rade for a colorful setting, Saturday's sports program shapes up as far & away the best of the post-war era. Bob Wolcott, beaten 6-2 by Yale in a non-league game last week, will seek to close out a splendid baseball career by assuring Princeton of a first-place tie in the Eastern circuit. Bob Goodyear is the Elis' bet to keep Wolcott from again conquering both the Blue and Harvard in a single season. The stout-hearted Tiger hurler turned the trick as a sophomore, has already edged the Crimson 1-0 this year.

The first international intercollegiate track meet since Hitler went into Poland is set for 5:30 in Palmer Stadium when a strong Princeton-Cornell combine plays host to an Oxford-Cambridge delegation in 13 events. First places only will count in the scoring in the renewal of a series that started 18 years ago and is deadlocked at 4 victories each and a tie.

The British are fast afoot, weak in the field, with the home forces favored to sweep the broad & high jumps, pole vault and shot put. But from the 100 and 220 through the quarter, half, mile, two-mile and sprint relay, the invaders have an even chance or better.

Their surest bets are team captain Roger Bannister of Oxford, who has topped some of the mile marks of the immortal Jack Lovelock, and Philip Morgan in the two-mile. Bannister, if pushed by Princeton's Ronnie Wittreich, might go as low as 4:10. Other possibilities for topflight performances if good conditions exist: new meet records by Paul Robeson, Jr. of Cornell, bettering 6' 3 3/4" in the high jump; by Howie Cusie of Princeton, topping 48' 7" in the shot; by Charlie Moore of Cornell, shaving 48.5 in the 440.

It should be an outstanding occasion. Probable outcome: Princeton-Cornell by 9-4.

News of the Theatres

THE PLAYHOUSE

The Stratton Story (Thurs.-Sat.), the real-life biography of the Chicago White Sox pitcher who made a courageous comeback after losing a leg in a hunting accident, allows James Stewart to give a truly heart-warming performance in his best post-war film. June Allyson is charming as his wife in a well-acted picture all moviegoers will like.

Edward, My Son (Sun.-Wed.) is the film version of the Broadway play which shows how an industrial tycoon ruined his partner, maltreated his wife and abandoned his mistress in order to give his spoiled son his every wish. Often interesting, always well-played but strangely unsympathetic drama, with Spencer Tracy, Deborah Kerr.

Streets of Laredo (Thurs.-Sat.), a Technicolored western with good photography, spins a leisurely yarn about three Texas outlaws all of whom yearn for the same girl. Two go straight, one gets the gal after a bit of cattle rustling and gunplay. William Holden, William Bendix, Mona Freeman.

THE GARDEN

The Red Pony (Fri.-Sat.), from a John Steinbeck story, tells of a boy (Peter Miles) who learns much of the joy and sorrow of life from his experiences with a pony he loves. Robert Mitchum, Myrna Loy in a satisfactory if somewhat verbose animal story.

Casablanca (Mon.-Tues.), made in 1942, stars Humphrey Bogart, Ingrid Bergman, Peter Lorre in a well-above-average melodrama. Exciting throughout.

Beauty and the Beast (Wed.) continues the series of foreign films moving into The Garden at mid-week. Another interesting French production, this one the work of Jean Cocteau.

moon at reduced rates; while a news story is headlined, "Antique Show to Open Here. Scarce 1949 Motor Cars to Highlight Show. Strange Four-Wheeled Land Vehicles Cause Much Comment."

We've taken too much space on them already, but they are fun. For engagement or graduation gifts which will really "outstand," go see them at The Town Shop, 12 Nassau.

Graduation Cakes, Cartoon-Decorated. June, 1949 has inspired Fred Crandall of The Colonial Bakery, 100 Nassau, to come up with two original additions to his colorful line of "cartoon cakes." The cartoons are done in colored piping icing, and Mr. Crandall is no mean artist himself, when it comes to squeezing out the decoration!

Either of the new pictures would make a fitting and amusing finale to your young graduate's big day. The first is a very wise old owl perched atop a veritable library of books with a world on his shoulder, appropriately wishing the honored eater, "Volumes of Congratulations, Dear Graduate." The second has a confident canine, decked out in cap and gown, carrying a banner and marching across a globe, captioned "With banners unfurled, may you conquer the world." All this gaiety is on a delicious, white-iced cake which can be ordered a day in advance for $3.

Cotton Cardigans. Inexpensive, practical and nice-looking are these fleece-lined (not hot, just soft) cotton cardigans at Bert-Ann's, 188 Nassau. They have a straight cut, button up to the neck and are perfect for keeping sunburn and breezes away while sailing, beaching, gardening or camping.

Available in blue, red, white, yellow and pink, the cardigans give you that extra covering without the unnecessary warmth of a sweater, wash more easily than a sweater (young campers, take notice) and cost—at a mere $2.50—a great deal less.

AUCTION SALE: Benefit of Building Fund, Princeton Methodist Church. Lester M. Slatoff, auctioneer, Sat., June 11, rain or shine. Inspection after 9:30 a.m. to time of sale. Luncheon served at church.
